Major Saudi-French arms deal possible

PARIS (AP). — Saudi Arabia may conclude a major agreement to buy French Mirage fighter planes and the Anglo-French supersonic Concorde passenger plane as a result of King Feisal's current state visit to France. French sources reported yesterday.

The Saudi air force has hitherto been equipped with British and American planes. Feisal has conferred intensively with President Georges Pompidou, Prime Minister Pierre Messmer and Defence Minister Robert Galley since his arrival earlier this week. They discussed the Middle East and French-Saudi military and economic cooperation.

Galley met separately today with Saudi Defence Minister Sultan Ibn Abdul Aziz, the king's brother, to discuss "strengthening of military cooperation between the two countries," French officials said. The supply of French arms to Saudi Arabia was one of the main subjects discussed during a long meeting between the king and President Pompidou at the Elysee Palace on Tuesday. The two leaders agreed that Galley should go to Saudi Arabia in the fall to review the deliveries of French tanks, armoured vehicles and helicopters and to discuss possible future deliveries of other equipment.

U.S. Space Agency works to cool off Skylab 1

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI). — U.S. Space Agency teams sifted hundreds of ideas yesterday for a solution to the overheating problems of Skylab 1 that threatened the success of America's first space station. The temperature in Skylab 1 rose to 43.5 centigrade in the living quarters and to 145 degrees on the outer surface facing the sun. The main insulation of the spacecraft ripped away during the launch Monday they said.

Officials said there was a possibility astronauts Charles "Pete" Conrad, Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz would be called to perform the first spacewalk ever to repair the spacecraft. All plausible alternatives are being investigated and Skylab director William C. Schneider took personal charge of the search for an answer at the Marshall Space Flight Centre in Huntsville, Alabama. The astronauts remained in pre-flight quarantine and flew from Cape Kennedy to Houston, Texas to assist in the search for a solution. Schneider said the high temperatures might cause equipment in the space station to emit gases like carbon monoxide, making the Skylab uninhabitable. The heating problem overshadowed the earlier trouble of the loss of half of Skylab's electricity generating capacity, officials said. The remaining operable solar cells would support a month-long mission if fewer experiments were performed.

DOLLAR RECOVERING Panic gold buying ends

LONDON (AP). — Panic buying of gold "at any price" ended in Europe yesterday, at least temporarily. The metal fell back from record highs for the first time this week and the battered U.S. dollar began a recovery.

Gold closed in London at $105 an ounce and in Zurich at $106.50 an ounce. The closing price in both centres, the world's two biggest gold markets, was $110.50 an ounce on Tuesday.

In Paris, where the gold price reached a record $124 briefly on Tuesday, it was down to $112.08 yesterday. It also dropped in Frankfurt and Milan. Dealers said the buying spree that sent gold prices rocketing on Monday and Tuesday was largely emotional, touched off in part when the metal broke through the psychologically important barrier of $100 an ounce on Monday. It had been hovering just below that level for three months.

Weather 'back to normal' today

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER
BET DAQON. — The weather will be back to normal this morning, after a couple of days of erratic winds and unseasonal rainfall, the meteorological service here said last night. The northern and central parts of the country reported 10-15 mms. of rainfall and blustery winds of up to 30 knots on Tuesday night and yesterday.

The unstable weather is due to a "Cyprian low," which consists of an incursion of cold and unstable air, followed by a complicated exchange of barometric highs and lows.

The cycle, which is not uncommon at this time of year, although it is usually milder — began on Monday, when a blast of hot air from the Arabian Peninsula brought temperatures in the 30's to much of the country. Within a few hours the temperature plummeted about 15 degrees, and stabilised in the 20's in the Tel Aviv area yesterday.

Most unexpected, the forecaster said, was the "relatively large quantity of rain — as much as the average measurements for the entire month of May." The meteorologist added that Cyprus lows usually were followed by very light rainfalls, often only a few drops.

Engineers labour pact initialled

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER
TEL AVIV. — The 1972-74 wage agreements between the government and the national unions of engineers and technicians were finally initialled at 1.30 a.m. yesterday, after a 15-hour meeting in the office of Civil Service Commissioner Ya'acov Nit-zan.

The drawn-out negotiations had broken down a number of times into warning strikes that threatened to materialise into full-scale work stoppages of the 40,000 members of the two unions. The final impasse was broken after Deputy Histadrut Secretary-General Yeruhim Meshel interceded.

In the agreement the unions won 35 per cent wage increases as agreed upon with the Minister of Finance. The net increase, in fact, is 20 per cent. But the delay in signing the contract will not affect back-pay, and members of both unions will get increases retroactive to April 1, 1972. Both unions committed themselves not to take any strike action for the period of the new agreement.

The engineers union (which includes architects, agronomists, chemists, geologists, geographers and meteorologists) gets a new wage scale comprising nine grades (instead of the six in the old one) plus another grade, to go into effect next year. The technicians get a scale of 11 grades, and a 12th next year. Top basic pay for an engineer will henceforth be IL1,870 (Histadrut IL1,100), while the lowest pay is IL600 (previously IL540).

Initialising the pact were Mr. Nit-zan for the Government, Behavia Ofek for the Histadrut, Engineers Union Secretary Aharon Medanes and Technicians Union Secretary Zelman Shenkman. They agreed to hold the official signing ceremony next week.

Ben-Aharon asks 10% C-o-L rise from July

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER
Histadrut Secretary-General Yitzhak Ben-Aharon said yesterday that the Cost-of-Living adjustment, which the Histadrut has demanded be paid in July, will amount to an unprecedented 10 per cent.

Speaking on Israel Radio's "Hayom Hazeh" programme, Mr. Ben-Aharon rejected a proposal to pay part of the increase in July, and the rest next January. "So long as the housewife cannot pay the price increases in instalments — we cannot compensate her for those increases in instalments," he said.

It is estimated that if paid in full, the adjustment would amount to a IL60-IL70 increase for wage earners making IL1,200 monthly gross.

Speaking on the same programme, the Governor of the Bank of Israel, Moshe Sanbar, noted that any increase — justified or not — would "not help in the war against inflation."

The Vice-President of the Manufacturers' Association, Avraham Shavit, said a C-o-L adjustment in the neighbourhood of 10 per cent would cost the Government an additional IL700m. and the manufacturers IL300m. This would bring in its wake an inevitable further rise in prices, he claimed. (THM)

Sorry for Egypt if it starts war—Meir

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER
NESS ZIONA. — Prime Minister Golda Meir last night warned the Egyptians against another round of hostilities. Referring to the war threats emanating from Cairo, Mrs. Meir declared: "I can only say I am truly and deeply sorry for what will happen to them and to anyone who tries to wage war against us."

(Mrs. Meir made a statement in as strong terms on May 6 at a meeting with Hebrew University students in Jerusalem.)

The Premier was the main speaker at the 90th anniversary celebrations of the foundation of this township near Rehovot. Nearly half the 13,000 residents turned out to welcome her at the local amphitheatre where Council Chairman Israel Smid made her the first Freeman of the town. Mrs. Meir looked somewhat drawn on her first day back at her official duties after nearly a week's stay in hospital for a check-up. She criticized the Israeli leftists who took part in the Communist-sponsored anti-Israel Bologna conference. She referred to them as "fringe elements who are willing to surrender everything to the enemies who wish to destroy us, in exchange for the right to sit down with that enemy."

Raising her voice, she declared to loud cheers, "But they do not represent you and the rest of our people."

Mrs. Meir said that a nation was measured by its readiness to live and its will to fight for its life. Israel, she stressed, was ready to stretch its hand out in peace to its neighbours.

Pointing to the orange groves surrounding the town, she declared: "We planted these groves. This is our country. We did not take it from anyone, nor did anyone give it to us. Nothing was ready-made for us. We created it all by our own toil."

Beirut's leading daily, "An-Nahar," said yesterday that Lebanese President Suleiman Franjeh is insisting on an agreement with the terrorists before a new government is formed. Franjeh yesterday conferred with outgoing Premier Amin el-Hafez, who was being mooted for the formation of the new government. AP reported yesterday that Lebanon had begun deporting foreigners without residence permits, to rid the country of pro-terrorist radicals and suspected "agents provocateurs." AP quoted police as saying that busloads of deportees were driven to the Syrian border and many more were deported on commercial jetliners. Syria, which closed its borders with Lebanon at the height of the fighting, was reported to have retaliated by banning Lebanese citizens and Palestinian residents of Lebanon from entering its territory. It also banned air rail traffic with the western neighbour, thus cutting off Lebanon's transit trade with Jordan, Iraq and the Persian Gulf.

Burundi cuts Israel ties

BUJUMBURA, Burundi (AFP). — The Government of Burundi broke off relations with Israel as of yesterday, Foreign Minister Atremore Simbananyi announced here before leaving for the Organisation of African Unity conference in Addis Ababa. He said it was a decision taken by the central committee of his party, and accorded with the principle of condemning all territorial acquisitions by force. He voiced his country's support for Egypt.

He said the OAU had spared no effort to get Israel to listen to wisdom and reason over withdrawing from the occupied areas.

During the past 13 months, five other African states have broken their ties with Israel. The first was Idi Amin's Uganda in the spring of 1972. Chad, Niger, Congo-Brazzaville and Mali followed in one spate towards the year's end.

Our Diplomatic Correspondent adds: Israeli observers, taken unawares the break with Burundi, suspected Egypt's hand behind the move. They recalled that the Burundi Foreign Minister visited Cairo recently and made some pointedly anti-Israel statements there. Observers here also assumed there was some financial inducement for the Burundi government.

The timing — the eve of the Organisation of African Unity (OAU) meeting in Addis Ababa — was planned in concert with the Egyptians and Libyans, observers here surmised. Burundi, south of Rwanda in East Africa, has had no resident Israeli ambassador for several years, and there are no Israelis known to be there. Officials here said Burundi was uninterested in Israeli aid projects, and Israel, for its part, was deterred by the mass slaughter of Tutsi tribesmen by Burundi authorities over the past 18 months.

23 Koreans die in bus-train collision

SEOUL (Reuters). — Twenty-three people, mostly students going to school, were killed yesterday when a packed bus was hit by a train on a railway crossing and plunged into a stream. More than 60 other passengers were injured, many of them seriously, in the collision that occurred near Kyungju city 270 km. south-east of here, police sources said.

'Egyptian action' as summit date nears

JERUSALEM POST ARAB AFFAIRS REPORTER
The Egyptians are apparently planning military action in an attempt to apply pressure on Moscow and Washington as Soviet communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev and U.S. President Richard Nixon prepare for their summit meeting next month.

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat is apparently hoping the two leaders will pressure Israel into making at least token concessions which would bolster his own shaky position. Sadat is being blamed at home and throughout the Arab world for the Middle East stalemate and instability.

The Cairo correspondent of Beirut's "An-Nahar" newspaper, Foad Mattar, yesterday gave next month as a hypothetical date for Egyptian military action against Israel, saying that "Sadat might blow up the Middle East situation on the eve or during the summit meetings" in Washington.

Mattar, who has access to Egypt's political circles, said "President Sadat is not likely to let the summit meeting between President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev in Washington next month pass quietly."

The Soviets have been cooperating with the Egyptians militarily, he said. Moscow will supply "or has probably already supplied" Cairo with 10 sophisticated MIG-23 or MIG-25 fighter-bombers, radar and jamming equipment. The "An-Nahar" correspondent added that Soviet military men will "or have actually" arrived in Cairo to help Egypt draw up plans for the protection of the Aswan Dam against air raids.

The renewed Cairo-Moscow military cooperation marked a change in the attitude of the Soviets, whose relations with Egypt have been strained since Sadat ousted over 15,000 Soviet military personnel last July. Mattar said. The two sides had reached agreement on the resumed supply of Soviet ammunition and spare parts to Egypt, noting that Sadat had made it clear to the Kremlin leaders that he was determined to go to war against Israel "with or without new Soviet weapons."

The Kremlin was convinced that if Sadat fought without the requested Soviet weapons and lost to the Israelis, it would be impossible for the Russians to consolidate their position in the Arab world, he concluded.

LOD AIRPORT. — The U.S. Secretary of State's special assistant for refugees and immigration matters, Frank Kellogg, arrived here last night aboard an El Al plane carrying a group of 100 Russian immigrants from Vienna.

"It was an unforgettable experience to travel with these immigrants, who left their birthplace to return to their ancient homeland," Mr. Kellogg said as he alighted from the plane. "I listened to many of them at length, and feel I have made some friends among them."

Mr. Kellogg, who recommended the grant of $48m. recently given by the U.S. for aid in absorbing Russian immigrants, is here for a five-day visit as guest of the Jewish Agency, to study immigrant-absorption procedures. (See story page 2)

Cement lack threat to school building in Jerusalem

By ABRAHAM RABINOVICH
Jerusalem Post Reporter

Unless 450 tons of cement are delivered to school building sites in Jerusalem within the next few weeks, Mayor Teddy Kollek warned yesterday, 16 schools now under construction will be unfinished when the new school term opens in September. Eight thousand students would be affected.

The mayor was speaking at a press conference at which he and Deputy Mayor Yosef Gadiash discussed the city's massive school expansion programme. The city has been adding an average of 1 1/4 classrooms a day, Mr. Kollek said, in order to keep up with the city's rapid population growth and to compensate for a shortage accumulated over the years.

Mr. Gadiash, responsible for the education portfolio on the Municipal Council, noted that the city's school population has increased by 17.5 per cent (to 60,438) over the past four years, compared to "normal" cities like Ramat Gan and Givatayim where the increase was 12 per cent.

During the next four years, the pace will more than double with the number of children in the city's educational network increasing by 40 per cent. In addition to the expansion of the regular school population, the increase will be due to the extension of pre-kindergarten facilities to most three- and four-year-olds in the city, the creation of day centres for one- to three-year-old children of working mothers and large families, and the extension of obligatory education to the 10th grade in the coming school year.

While 100 classrooms have been added to existing schools in East Jerusalem, Mr. Kollek said, no new schools have been built there, while in West Jerusalem 40 new schools have been built in the past three years alone. The principle difficulty, the mayor said, has been in fixing sites for new schools in East Jerusalem according to an overall educational plan (such a plan is to be completed in about two months) and in acquiring the land — without expropriation — once a site had been decided upon. He hoped that construction will get under way within two or three months on the first new East Jerusalem schools. Buildings are planned for Um Tuba (near Sur Bahir), Issawiya and Beit Sefafa.

Mr. Gadiash acknowledged that psychological consultation, specialized education, and other services available in West Jerusalem schools are still lacking in East Jerusalem. "Our object is to equalize services in East and West Jerusalem. It takes time."

Where no kindergartens existed in East Jerusalem in 1967, he said, 75 per cent of 6-year-olds in that part of the city now attend kindergarten.

Mr. Kollek said that East Jerusalem high schools, which virtually emptied after an Israeli Arab curriculum was imposed in 1967, have now refilled. The students had left because the Israeli curriculum did not prepare them for admission to universities in the Arab states. A revised curriculum was then introduced preparing the students for admission to both Arab and Israeli universities.

Histadrut building firms to erect rental homes

By YAAQOV ARDON
Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — Solei Boneh and Shikun Ovdim, the two large Histadrut building companies, will join to construct rental homes, Shikun Ovdim northern director Menashe Gavissar announced yesterday.

The homes are to be offered at reasonable rentals that would yield a return of about 40 per cent. The government has promised to subsidize up to 60 per cent to make it feasible. In Haifa, 150 apartments will be built.

Mr. Gavissar also said that an entirely new quarter of 2,000 homes, with complete infrastructure, will be built in the triangle east of the junction between Ruppiner and Harkiner roads. Work is to start next year and be completed three years later.

Shikun Ovdim, the largest single builder of homes for young couples, is now putting up 750 homes in Haifa, and they have all been sold to young couples at cost price. The company helps them get unlinked 15-year mortgages of up to 50 per cent and sometimes more at 11 per cent interest, Shikun Ovdim spokesman Y. Ben Bassat said.

The Histadrut company is building 3,000 homes in north Israel, two thirds of them in the Greater Haifa area. There they account for four-fifths of all housing earmarked for young couples, either direct or through the Municipality.

At many of its projects the company installed electric power generators (at a cost of IL80,000, excluding the masonry work) because the Electric Corporation could not guarantee an adequate supply. The company also widened roads, built a supermarket at one project, and cares for the appearance of the neighbourhood. One of the serious obstacles was the shortage of cement, Mr. Gavissar complained. Many projects were being held up, and he received countless pleas from contractors building for the company to supply them with cement.

Shikun Ovdim policy to sell to own employees

By MACABEE DEAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The policy of Shikun Ovdim is, and has been, to encourage its own employees to buy flats which it builds, the spokesman of the housing company told The Jerusalem Post on Tuesday. He added that it grants its own employees a three per cent reduction.

He was commenting on a report which appeared on Monday in "Ha'aretz", charging that the company had sold several 82-square-metre flats in Haifa four years ago to several senior members of the company before they were offered for sale to the general public. He added that the company was entitled to sell flats when and to whom it wanted.

The spokesman noted that the identical press report had been published in the same paper on January 14. After this had been brought to the attention of the newspaper's editors, they apologized for printing "false news," the spokesman claimed. He charged that the original report and its reprint had been published for political purposes.

Family of Israel group, fears for own safety, going back to U.S.

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Members of the Family of Israel group, who have for the past two years tried to establish a settlement in which assimilating American youth and problem Israeli youth could be returned to Judaism, are going back to the U.S.

Sara and Reuven Mandell, who founded the group, said here yesterday that they are returning out of fear for their safety and with a desire to continue their work to save young American Jews in the U.S. from becoming assimilated.

The Jewish Agency has turned abandoned Kibbutz Kedma — in which the Mandells and about a dozen of their followers settled — over to an Agudat Yisrael Nahal group, while allowing the Mandells and the other members of Mishpachat Yisrael to stay in their buildings and ordering the new settlers not to touch their belongings. The Mandells claim that they are not allowed to set foot outside their front door and that as soon as they do so they are accused of trespassing. They claim that they have been terrorized, intimidated, cursed and even beaten, and their belongings confiscated.

Now, Mr. Mandell said, he is frightened to stay. The Aguda group, he said, came to Kedma with "sticks and rocks" and took over the settlement into which he has invested IL279,000 of his own and the group's funds.

A tearful Mrs. Mandell, herself a convert to Judaism, said that although they are leaving, they "love every single stone in Israel and harbour no bitterness whatever against the people." They are concerned about the apathy, however, and they will try to get to meet Prime Minister Golda Meir before they leave in a month's time, because they know that she is concerned about the problem of assimilating Jewish youth.

Police Minister Shlomo Hillel presents Dieter Oving of Germany with the first prize for winning the six-day "Tour d'Israel" cycle race from Dan to Jerusalem via Beersheva yesterday. Oving covered the distance in 12 hours 56 minutes 30 seconds, ahead of two English cyclists, John Lovies (12:57:37) and Colin Davidson (12:57:48). The final 80-km. stretch from Beersheva to Jerusalem via Hebron was won by Germany's Klaus Arndt in 1 hour 50 minutes. (Israel)

Former head of BBC Broadcasters' independence 'absolutely essential'

By PHILIP GILLON
Jerusalem Post Reporter

The independence of broadcasters on television and radio is absolutely essential if the media are to be good, declared Sir Hugh Cudworth, former Director-General of the BBC, at a press conference in Beit Agron yesterday.

He maintained that the people concerned with presenting the news should disregard all pressures from the Government or from interested parties, while the head of broadcasting should function in a similar capacity to that of an editor-in-chief of a group of newspapers, maintaining general editorial supervision and being available for consultation on sensitive issues when ever needed. No directions are given to broadcasters on the BBC as to what news should be selected, or how it should be presented, he said.

Sir Hugh, who arrived three days ago, is in Israel for three weeks to make a survey of Israeli television and radio, at the request of Deputy Premier Yigal Alon who is responsible in the Knesset for the Broadcasting Authority. He has no specific terms of reference, but has been given a "blank cheque" to see everything, talk with everybody, and report as he thinks fit. His report will cover all aspects of radio and television, including programming and labour relations.

As a rule, he said, television should try to present "a reasonable mix" of entertainment, information and education. What was "a reasonable mix" might vary in different countries. He was aware that the Israeli Broadcasting Law stressed education, but added that the execution of laws depended on their "interpretation by sensible people."

He doubted very much whether there was any truth in a suggestion made by one journalist that the BBC world service was in any way prejudiced against Israel: certainly no anti-Israel directions had been given while he was in office, or later, of which he was aware. He doubted whether the use of the word "guerrillas" for Arab terrorists had any political implications.

As a general rule, he did not think that it was necessarily a bad thing in a small country for broadcasting to be a state monopoly. Talents were liable to be thin, and competition might result in a reduction in standards because of the spread of the talent available.

Explosive device found in Jerusalem

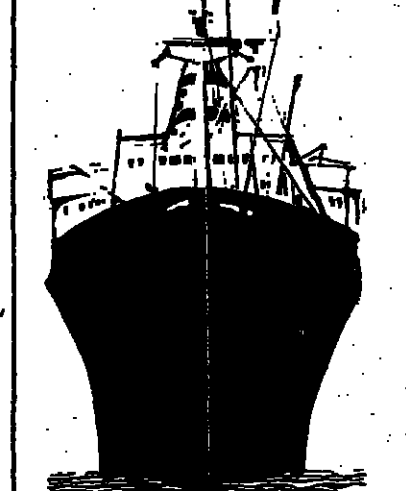

Jerusalem Post Reporter

A small explosive device was found yesterday morning outside the General Building in Jerusalem's Jaffa Road. It was dismantled by police.

The device was discovered at 5:30 a.m. by a newspaper delivery man, who noticed a suspicious object wrapped in a plastic bag. The explosive was attached to a timing device set to go off at 7 a.m.

The General Building contains a number of Government offices, including passport and income tax bureaux. No arrests have been made.

TOURISM MINISTER Moshe Kol was yesterday made Freeman of the Tamar Region, which encompasses the Dead Sea area. He is the third to be so honoured.

Pro-Jackson petition starts circulating

By SARAH HOMIG
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Soviet Immigrants Association and the Prisoners of Zion Association have begun circulating a petition among the estimated 80,000 new immigrants from the U.S.S.R. here, which appeals to members of both the U.S. Senate and the House of Representatives to be steadfast in their support of the Jackson amendment.

The organizers hope to obtain "tens of thousands" of signatures from immigrants, regardless of their political and factional affiliations, in the days preceding the scheduled visit of Soviet Communist Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev to the U.S. next month. A delegation may then take the petition to the U.S. Congress just before the Brezhnev visit to "offset" any meaningless promises which he might make to remove Congressional pressure against granting the U.S.S.R. most-favoured-nation status in trade with the U.S.," it was stated.

'INFAMOUS TAX'

The petition, written in English, Russian and Georgian, stresses that the "promise of the Soviet Government to suspend implementation of the infamous education tax regulation does not solve the problem of masses of Jews throughout the U.S.S.R. who want to return to the historic homeland of the Jewish people." It asks the American lawmakers to persevere in their "support for this beneficial amendment, which only demands the implementation of a basic human right."

One of the former Prisoners of Zion, David Yafit, said yesterday that the circulation of such a petition is impossible among the three million Jews in the Soviet Union as there it constitutes a crime punishable by banishment to concentration camps and incarceration in so-called mental hospitals. Those Jews in Israel who have succeeded in getting out from Russia, have become the representatives of the Jewish masses who are not able to speak out so openly, he argued.

Another former prisoner, Nehemia Accabi, said that with the "Soviet authorities now pressed against wall, we are afforded an all-once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to the Jews out which if missed not turn up again for many years. We must press not only the repeal of the ransom tax for the repatriation of any Jew so desires, just as Poles were repatriated 15 years ago."

At the end of the news conference the Prisoners of Zion Association spokesman announced that the group has accepted 14-year-old Miriam Tsimkin as its youngest member. The girl was kidnapped from her grandmother's Moscow apartment February 19, 1973, just before family was about to emigrate. She is still held a prisoner in a Y. Pioneers camp in the Crimea, where she is even not allowed to ask her father, now here, her room. Her father, now here, asked that she be admitted to association as she is being deprived of her freedom and separated from her family solely due to the fact that she wishes to live as a Jew.

KGB seizes Levich's son on street

MOSCOW (AP). — Jewish physicist Yevgeny Levich was arrested yesterday by plainclothes police on his way to a Mo hospital for a military medical examination. Jewish sources reported that the KGB seized the son of the famous physicist, known theoretical chemist B. Min Levich, was walking with wife, Janna, on a Moscow street toward the city's Hospital N when he was grabbed by several unidentified men who were believed to be KGB agents, the inform said. The young scientist was taken into an unmarked sedan "driven away to an unknown location," the sources said. He was left standing on the sidewalk.

In a statement to foreign nationalists, the sources said "both chief of the Military Commission and the Moscow Police said were unaware of the arrest." Sources therefore assumed Levich was detained by the KGB. Yevgeny Levich last month ordered to appear for induction into the Soviet armed forces, but sed until he was examined by a civilian medical commission. He feared from stomach tumours scheduled to undergo an operation later this year.

The entire Levich family, including Yevgeny's brother Alex, has been refused permission to leave the USSR. Yevgeny Levich, who turns 50 today, was the youngest citizen to graduate from Moscow University with a physics doctorate at the age of 21.

Four held for rape, abducting girl into prostitution

TEL AVIV. — Four men here are suspected of abducting a 14-year-old girl, holding her captive two days, raping her repeatedly, and bringing other men to her, in an effort to force her into prostitution.

The four, Moshe Avitan, Shlomo and Shimon Boshari and Nissim Strugall, all 24, from Neve Shalom, are said to have held the girl in a shack in Tel Aviv. They were remanded for 10 days by the Tel Aviv Magistrate's Court.

On the thirtieth day after the passing of our colleague

LOTZA CLOVER-LEAF 'IN YEAR' TO CUT DOWN ON FATALITIES

By ASHER WALLFISH
Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

Minister Yosef Almog said yesterday work on an 11.7 km. clover-leaf junction on the Tel-Aviv-Jerusalem highway is almost completed, he said, replying to an urgent motion agenda about the accidents on the highway. The motion, presented by Shoval (State List), was unanimously approved by the Knesset.

The junction was built and the highway routed, Mr. Almog said, the public has to pay attention to the warning signs on the highway.

Each day in 1973 on the average, over 100 vehicles travelled the Jerusalem highway. There had been only 11,700 daily. Almog said that the Public Works Ministry is responsible for building a highway which is safe, efficient, and of improving roads last year.

Next covered six clover-leaf junctions: Netanya, Beer, Ganot, Alir and Lod. Projects would include better lighting, safety fences, easier turns, footpaths and lights.

Safety projects were not always just a matter of budgets, the Minister said. There is the lengthy democratic process of out the landowners whose property is in the way. Services had also to be taken into account. The PWD had no control over that nature.

In preventive measures already taken on the highway, had reduced accidents by one-third as compared with the year 1971/72, the Minister said. A basalt-grit surface had been added to the friction coefficient, and made more effective. Steel rails had been built on the verge. Special signs had been put up, one of them illuminated on rainy days, to warn of skidding.

Mechanical and human factors were just as important in accidents as road conditions, he said. On May 10, when a semi-trailer loaded with cement crashed on the Motza bridge, the fault was a failure in the gear-box, he said. The driver jumped clear in time.

He said that the human factor was also often vital on three-lane highways like the stretch near Beit Dagon, where the Angel family crashed this week. (Six of the family were killed.)

Mr. Almog injected a more general note into the debate, when he urged that highways be removed from the purview of the Labour Ministry — though not handed over to the Transport Ministry. His solution, he said, was for the next Government (after the autumn elections) to have a Ministry of Building, which would concentrate on the handling of highways, public building, and building-for-housing.

A similar change, which should override Coalition-making considerations, he said, would be to create a new Ministry of Prosperity (Mitsvat Harevaka) which would apparently combine National Insurance and Welfare, as well as employment and rehabilitation.

In his motion, Mr. Shoval said the motza danger stretch had caused 67 accidents with casualties, between 1967 and 1971. The danger, statistically, on the curve is between three and four times greater than on any stretch of highway of the same length. He said that the sight of vehicles lying battered in the wall below, after they had crashed through the stone barrier, was a weekly occurrence.

The electronic sign at the western side of the bridge was not operating yesterday morning when rain was forecast, he said. It was rarely in operation, he noted. Drivers were liable to believe that no danger existed on the days when it was not working.

Mr. Shoval said that in any event it was unwise to rely on the sort of drivers on this country's roads to take proper precautions. Perhaps speed should be limited on the curve to 40 k.p.h., he suggested. The authorities had, regrettably, to help the citizen to protect his own life. Radical measures were necessary.

Surely the lives and welfare of the travellers killed and injured in the last few years, were worth as much as the cost of rerouting the highway at Motza? Mr. Shoval asked.

The Beit Dagon stretch of the Tel Aviv-Jerusalem highway, where the Angel family had crashed so tragically, was also a sure disaster zone, because of the three lanes and the many blind hills.

Mr. Shoval said that he knew of many three-lane highways in Europe where the problem had been solved simply by having two lanes in one direction, and one lane in the other direction, over alternate stretches of three lanes, at a time.

Mr. Shoval said the public and the authorities were not sufficiently concerned about the loss of life on the highways.

He suggested that the Transport Ministry make a proper check of Sussita vehicles, to see whether their foreglass bodies provided sufficient protection in the event of accidents. All too often, in crashes, one could see how flimsy the foreglass was.

Mr. Shoval said it was high time that the highways were managed by the Transport Ministry and not the Labour Ministry. Israel must have one single address for all transportation matters, he urged.

Knesset Finance Committee resolves Sapir to report on fund-raising efforts

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir and other Ministers concerned with health education and welfare projects funded partly by overseas and local philanthropists, will in future put the Knesset Finance Committee more into the picture.

In a departure from former procedure, Mr. Sapir and his colleagues have undertaken to present lists of priorities, projects, and their execution, to the Finance Committee for preliminary discussion and approval.

These changes were contained in one of seven points made in a Finance Committee resolution passed by the Coalition yesterday, against the votes of the Gahal minority.

The Finance Committee devoted most of its resolution to praising Mr. Sapir's fund-raising efforts, and giving its assurances that the entire campaign had been adequately supervised in detail by the Committee and by the State Comptroller.

The Jerusalem Post understands that Mr. Sapir used to report informally to the Committee after his frequent trips abroad, on the donations he had solicited. These reports will now become periodic and formal, it appears. Mr. Sapir used to present Committee chairman Israel Kargman with lists in writing, which remained available in the files, for interested members, but not all the members consulted the lists. Last week, for the first time, the whole Committee was circulated with lists. In the past, no discussion, as such, was held, and no approval was sought.

The section of the resolution providing for "preliminary discussion and approval" was worked in by a last-minute line-up between the N.R.P.'s Yehuda Ben-Meir, and the Alignment's David Coren and Ze'ev Haring.

The main point in the defeated Gahal draft resolution would have barred Mr. Sapir from fund-raising in Israel. Since Mr. Sapir is responsible for taxation, granting of loans for investment, credits to manufacturers and many other economic decisions, Gahal argues that soliciting funds from the same people could theoretically entail an element of pressure.

Teacher training school inaugurated

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — A new boarding school for teacher training was inaugurated at the Avi Citrin vocational yeshiva near Atlit yesterday. At the same time, a cornerstone was laid for an electronics school wing. The management announced it will open the country's first course for religious merchant marine officers next year.

The ceremony was attended by Finance Minister Pinhas Sapir, who was instrumental in raising the donations for the new buildings.

'Cool-off' for officers aspiring to Cabinet jobs

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

Regular Army officers who aspire to a Cabinet post, will have to resign 100 days before their appointment, according to a private members bill by Mapam's Reuven Arzi. The Knesset Law Committee approved it for tabling in the House shortly.

The same cooling-off period would serve for judges and religious court judges (dayanim).

His bill has been aptly nicknamed the "Weizman Law" since it would prevent over-the-weekend jumps from Army uniform to a Cabinet post, like that by Ezer Weizman (Aful-Res.) after the 1969 elections.

Law Committee members suggested yesterday that a fourth restricted category, senior civil servants, should be added.

AFTER MAKLEFF RESIGNATION Gvati sees citrus farmers

By YITZHAK OKED
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Minister of Agriculture Haim Gvati met yesterday morning with leaders of citrus farming organizations which are members of the Citrus Marketing Board, to discuss the resignation of the general manager of the CMB, Mordechai Makleff. No official communiqué was published after the meeting.

At the end of the meeting, Mr. Gvati would only say that he was sorry about Mr. Makleff's resignation and that no decision was taken at the meeting on Mr. Makleff's successor.

The Jerusalem Post has reliably learned that yesterday's meeting was to sound out the attitudes of all sides on a possible successor. It is believed that a consensus was reached between the private and Histadrut growers that the next general manager should be a neutral man, not coming from either sector.

Yitzhak Ziv-Av, Director-General of the private Farmers' Federation, told The Post that the crisis had hit the CMB when it was in the midst of changes in order to compete on the world markets when there was "overproduction of citrus" in the world.

He hoped that Mr. Makleff's resignation would not draw the CMB into a sectoral war. "There is an unwritten law on who heads each marketing board, for instance the head of the Vegetable Marketing Board is a moshavnik, the Fruit Marketing Board is headed by a kibbutz, the Cotton Marketing Board is also headed by a kibbutz member from the religious kibbutz. By this unwritten agreement, we (the private sector) are allotted the head of the CMB. We were the ones who chose Mr. Makleff for the job and we were lucky that in picking Mr. Makleff we chose a neutral man."

Mr. Reuven Eiland, managing director of the Histadrut's Kinyan export, decided to comment on Mr. Makleff's resignation as he had not yet received an official notice of it. He admitted he had met with Mr. Gvati, but would not reveal what was discussed. "If the reports about Mr. Makleff's resignation are true, then the Minister of Agriculture must pick a neutral man to head the CMB," he declared.

Mr. Zvi Kanan, general manager of the Fardes syndicate of the Israel Citrus Growers Cooperative Society Ltd. (in the private sector) told The Post that they had started looking for a suitable candidate to take over Mr. Makleff's job. They hoped to find a candidate as soon as possible so he could participate in the planning of the next citrus export season, he said, confirming that the candidate that they would propose to the Minister of Agriculture would be neutral.

Mr. Makleff resigned because of the CMB's delay in accepting changes that he wanted to introduce. He submitted his resignation last week and it will go into effect on September 1.

The CMB is a statutory board comprised of 10 members of citrus growers associations (both from the private and Histadrut sectors), and two Government representatives, one from the Commerce and Industry Ministry and another from the Finance Ministry. The chairman of the board is the Minister of Agriculture. The Director-General of the Agriculture Ministry is now serving as acting chairman.

'Who's a Jew' to be major issue at elections

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter

Interior Minister Yosef Burg yesterday signalled that the "Who's a Jew" complex, revolving around the question of Halachic or non-Halachic conversion to Judaism, could become a major election issue. A second issue would be the citizen's right to register as Jewish or non-Jewish freely.

Summing up the debate on the work of the Interior Ministry over the budgetary year, the National Religious Party Interior Minister went out of his way to praise the attitude of his rivals in the Aguda and Poale Aguda on the "Who's a Jew" issue. Describing them as "sister-factions" he said that Aguda and Poale Aguda had shown responsibility on the issue.

"There is no argument between us on the substance," he said, emphatically. "This is not a party issue. This is a Jewish intellectual challenge."

Dr. Burg warned that the recent Supreme Court ruling about a citizen's right to delete "Jewish nationality" from his identity card (the Yeshaya Schick case) was a dangerous development.

The State of Israel had no interest in allowing people to decide whether or not they should be registered as Jews by religion or nationality. "No other country allows this possibility," he said.

The Law of Return must be amended, the Minister said.

Mexico starts getting first Arava planes

TEL AVIV. — Israel Aircraft has begun delivery to the first of five Arava (take-off-and-landing) aircraft. The Jerusalem Post well-informed sources say.

Officials have ordered the light version of the aircraft, costing $550,000-$600,000 in accordance with the final configurations revealed to its use as Stol.

The little plane can carry a fully-equipped assault parachute team (or men or jeep or similar type of vehicle). With slight modifications, the plane can also be used as a counter-insurgency carrying rocket pods for machineguns or even a.

modore Jet — renamed the "Westwind 1123" — an executive-type jet with a price tag of $1,050,000 — is also reported to be doing well.

The Westwind is a redesigned descendant of the Rockwell Jet Commander bought a number of years ago. It has now entered the "finals" in a U.S. Coast Guard elimination race (for a total order of 40 aircraft) which has narrowed down between it and the Cessna Citation. The Cessna is a lighter and also some what cheaper plane, but informed observers here are optimistic, believing that the Westwind's longer range (2120 static miles — including a 45-minute "holding" reserve) and 0.765 mach top speed at sea level gives it an edge over its competitor.

One Westwind has been leased to the Coast Guard. It has been in operational service for one month and will stay for five more before the final choice is announced.

Meanwhile, Atlantic Aviation Distributors, representing the Israel aviation industry in the U.S., has already sold 12 civilian versions of the Westwind. Four have been delivered, including one to the Litton Electronics conglomerate.

Parley on plastic arts at Ein Hod

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — An international symposium on the plastic arts will be held at the Ein Hod artists' village between May 21 and 28.

Marcel Janco, the founding father of Ein Hod, who helped to start the "Dada" movement almost 60 years ago, told the press this week that "the arts in Europe and America have reached an impasse. But we refuse to yield to despair or take up fashionable but ephemeral non-art forms. At the Ein Hod symposium we shall exchange notes with some friends from abroad who also seek new paths for serious arts."

Saigon reports heavy fighting, casualties

SAIGON. — Terrorist attacks and sharp fighting along South Vietnam's Central and Northern coast took a heavy toll of Communist and government casualties, the Saigon command said yesterday.

A communiqué from the Saigon command reported that 20 persons were killed and 30 were wounded Tuesday night when Communist terrorists set off a bomb in a crowded outdoor movie near the northern provincial capital of Tam Ky, 40 miles south of Da Nang.

Farther south, along the central coast, the Saigon Command reported one of the largest actions since the cease-fire went into effect January 28.

Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, chief spokesman for the Saigon Command, said that government infantrymen on a "security defence mission" before dawn yesterday intercepted a Communist transportation unit which was moving a large number of weapons and ammunition in Binh Dinh province.

Hien claimed 49 Communist troops were killed, with artillery support, and more than 100 weapons and a quantity of ammunition were seized. He said that only two government infantrymen were wounded.

Meanwhile, the Polish chairman of the four-nation International Commission of Control and Supervision signed a letter instructing the peace-keeping group's regional team at Ben Hoa to investigate Vietcong charges of U.S. air attacks in South Vietnam near the Cambodian border. No date has been set.

South Vietnam said yesterday that military talks with the Vietcong to implement the Paris cease-fire agreement had reached an impasse. Brigadier General Phan Hoa Hiep, deputy leader of the Saigon Government's delegation to the two-party joint military commission, told a press conference that the "break-down" in the military talks was caused by Vietcong stubbornness. Nevertheless, he said, talks will continue.

Saigon yesterday announced the abolition of 26 South Vietnamese political parties for having failed to meet with requirements stipulated in South Vietnam's regulations on political parties.

Bomb-threatened jumbo lands safely

DENVER (UPI). — A Boeing 747 jumbo jet bound for Tokyo with 103 passengers and 22 crew members landed at Stapleton International Airport early yesterday. A caller said a bomb set to go off at 2,300 metres was aboard the plane and demanded $30,000 to disarm it.

The plane, Northwest Airlines flight 7 from Seattle to Tokyo, was diverted to Denver, although the Denver airport is below 7,000 feet. Mexico City, the closest airport above 7,000 feet was outside the fuel range of the plane.

OAU ministers meet today in Addis Ababa

ADDIS ABABA (Reuters). — The Organisation of African Unity marks its first decade in a meeting here today of a ministerial conference, which will prepare the agenda for a three-day summit of heads of state and government later this month.

The OAU's Deputy Secretary-General, Mohamed Sahloun, told a press conference yesterday that the ministerial council would consider one of the largest agendas in the OAU's history during its session, which will be opened by emperor Haile Selassie. He said the Somali government had asked that the ministerial meeting agenda should include an item on considering intervention in a territorial dispute with Ethiopia.

Lagos rejects call to move OAU base

LAGOS (AP). — Nigeria has rejected Libya's demand for the removal of the Organisation of African Unity's headquarters from Addis Ababa because of the presence of an Israeli embassy in Ethiopia, Nigeria's external affairs commissioner Okot Arikpo said here yesterday.

Mr. Arikpo addressed an airport news conference shortly before leaving to attend a ministerial council meeting of the 41-nation OAU at Addis Ababa.

Libyan leader Mu'ammur Gaddafi recently asked the OAU to transfer its headquarters to either Cairo or Algiers. Uganda's President Idi Amin immediately backed the call and offered his capital Kampala as an alternative site.

President Nixon and Ethiopian Emperor Haile Selassie meet in Washington on Tuesday. The 30-year-old Emperor left for Geneva yesterday after his two-day U.S. visit in which he is believed to have requested military aid to maintain the balance of power in the Red Sea-Gulf of Aden region.

Venezuela students riot as Rogers meets leaders

CARACAS (Reuters). — Students burned a U.S. flag and clashed with police here yesterday in a demonstration protesting against a visit by Secretary of State William Rogers.

Police used tear gas to disperse the demonstrators in the university area.

Students set fire to two vehicles, including a truck belonging to the U.S. Singer corporation. They then fled into a university building and hoisted black anarchist flags on the rooftop.

Mr. Rogers, meanwhile, was holding talks with Venezuelan government ministers to explain President Nixon's new policy of "non-interventionism" towards Latin American countries.

Later yesterday, Mr. Rogers flew to Peru, where he was due to discuss possible nationalization of U.S.-owned mining firms with Peru's leftist leaders.

Rhodesia says Zambian troops opened fire Two Canadian tourists killed at Victoria Falls

SALISBURY. — Zambian troops opened fire on a party of tourists at the Victoria Falls on Tuesday killing two Canadian girls and seriously wounding an American man, a Rhodesian government statement said yesterday.

The statement said one Canadian girl was killed instantly by automatic gunfire. Another Canadian girl was hit and fell into the Zambesi river, but neither body had been recovered.

The statement said there was "irrefutable proof" that Zambian troops were responsible for the attack on the group of tourists. There was no question of African nationalist guerrillas, who have been active in Rhodesia for the past few months, being involved, it added.

"Shortly after two p.m. on Tuesday, Zambian troops armed with automatic weapons opened fire in the vicinity of the pumping station near the fourth gorge at the Victoria Falls on a party of four tourists — two Canadian girls and an American husband and wife," the statement said.

Rhodesian rescue teams yesterday used a helicopter to get the wounded American John Caruthers, 28, of Troy, Ohio, who was hit in the stomach, out of the gorge. He and his uninjured wife, Carol, were immediately flown to a hospital at nearby Windle.

This is the second shooting incident this year involving charges that Zambian troops fired across the river at civilians.

Earlier this year three Rhodesians in a fishing boat were fired on by Zambian troops, Rhodesian officials said. One man was killed and two others wounded.

Barzel yields second post within week

By BRIAN ARTHUR

Jerusalem Post Correspondent

BONN. — Conservative opposition leader Rainer Barzel yesterday surprised West Germans a second time within a week by announcing he will not seek re-election this June as national chairman of the Christian Democratic party.

His move in effect left the party headless both on the national level and in parliament, where Mr. Barzel gave up caucus leadership last week when it became apparent he had lost control over his followers.

It also left unclear who would represent the Christian Democrats at a dinner meeting with Soviet party boss Leonid Brezhnev who is due to arrive here Friday for a five-day official visit.

Observers saw Mr. Barzel's decision as admission he had lost majority support within the party. He represented the progressive wing of the Christian Democrats, who sought a flexible adaptation of party social and foreign policy to the challenge posed by Socialist Chancellor Willy Brandt.

He was unable, however, to cope with the powerful conservative faction led by Franz Josef Strauss, head of the party's Bavarian wing.

Interest here shifted quickly to Mr. Barzel's younger rival, Helmut Kohl, Premier of the State of Rheinland Palatinate, who is the only remaining candidate at present for party chairmanship at a special June convention.

Israel envoy Scheel on eve Middle East v

BONN (INA). — Israel's Ambassador to Bonn, Eliahu Ben-Zion, called on West German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel on Tuesday to discuss the request for a five-day official visit.

Ben-Zion said "subject to mutual agreement" were discussed the Middle East on Sunday will have political talks in Amman, and Beirut. It is that the Israeli Ambassador lined Israel's views on peace and the situation in the Middle East.

Lebanese Ambassador K. Labadie said in Bonn Tuesday the visit could help get the East out of its impasse. He also said the timing of Chancellor Brandt's visit to Israel, which coincides with the anniversary of the Six Day War, Mr. Labadie hoped the Chancellor not visit any of the occupied territories.

Soviets urge wider troop-cut talks

VIENNA (UPI). — The Soviet Union said yesterday negotiations on East-West troop cuts in Central Europe should eventually be extended to other parts of Europe, and all interested European nations, including neutrals, allowed to take part.

"At present the question under consideration is reduction of armed forces in Central Europe; this does not exclude, however, a possibility of discussing in future the question of reduction of armed forces in other parts of our continent," the Soviet statement said.

He was outlining Soviet views on East-West force reduction at a meeting of 19 North Atlantic Treaty Organization (Nato) and Pact nations in preparation for a summit conference, this week in Vienna.

So far, the Western allies sought to confine the talks to Central Europe, where the Nato and Warsaw Pact forces face each other in a situation of mutual suspicion with troops on the Central European border.

There were no contradictions among the 140 member states of the assembly of the Council of Europe. Only one abstained.

The action is not made by 17-member governments. The legislators urged it to use political and economic in the states the states conceivably would have had to give territory to prepare the residue or to find asylum territory."

The debate made it clear the legislators were direct attack against the Austrian Karl Oesterle, the Austrian who drafted the resolution, said.

"The real solution lies in the hands of certain Arab governments which provide indirect financial assistance to allow them to operate in the territory and provide a necessary."

The Florida House of Representatives Tuesday defeated a bill to give terminally ill or injured persons the right to order doctors to let them die.

On a 53-53 vote, the House rejected a "Death with Dignity" bill sponsored by Rep. Walter Sackett, a 67-year-old Miami doctor.

The bill would have permitted any competent person 18 or over to sign a document stopping life-supporting treatment. Two licensed physicians would first have had to attest that the person was certain to die from injuries or disease.

At least 781 persons have died in the nearly four-year-old conflict.

For example, it had strengthened and stabilized the situation in the Middle East, he said.

Rightist officer 'dies in escape bid' in Bolivia

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP). — The death of a right-wing army colonel who had been charged with conspiring against the government caused the government to consult and take extra precautions yesterday in La Paz.

The government of President Hugo Banzer announced on Monday that Col. Andres Selich, 48, had died from a fall down a flight of stairs following his arrest at what was described as a meeting of anti-government conspirators in La Paz. An autopsy report said Selich, a former ranger commander and an ex-minister of interior in the Banzer Government, suffered multiple broken ribs, a ruptured liver and subsequent hemorrhage. The injuries were sustained, the government said, when the handcuffed Selich fell down the stairs in an attempt to escape in the Interior Ministry Building.

Selich, an expert in anti-guerrilla warfare, was considered one of Bolivia's most vocal anti-Communists and had become an opponent of the current government, which he helped place in power in August, 1971. As commander of a ranger regiment in the eastern city of Santa Cruz, he played a leading role in the bloody three-day rebellion which ousted the left-wing regime of Gen. Jose Torres.

French deny Hague court's competence in bomb test case

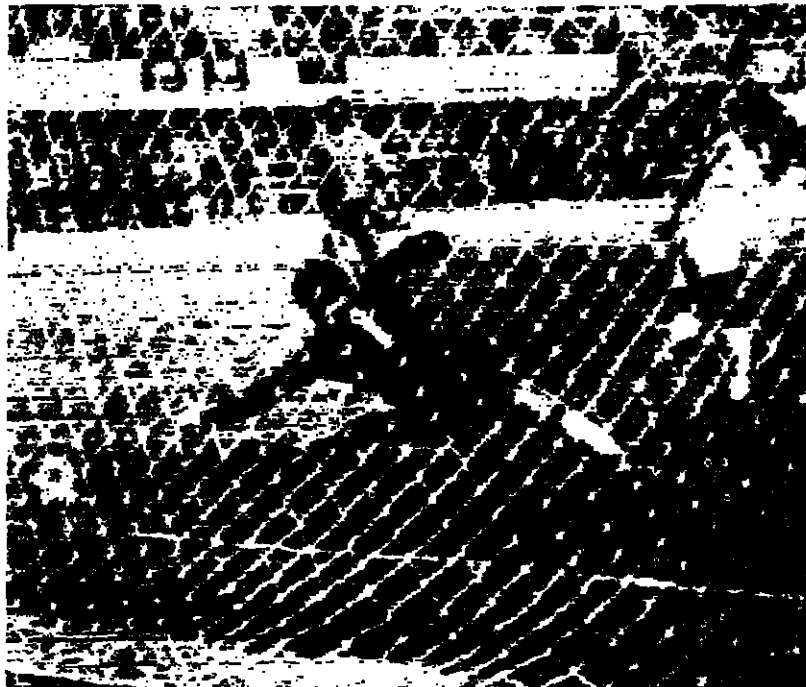

PARIS (AP). — Foreign Minister Michel Jobert yesterday told the French Cabinet that France does not recognize the competence of the International Court of Justice in The Hague to rule on Australian and New Zealand complaints against French atomic tests in the Pacific.

The presentations of Australia and New Zealand are expected to be made to the Court next Monday.

Mr. Jobert said that France based its position on a 1928 statute fixing the competence of the court, and on the fact that France does not accept the competence of the court for any question concerning its national defense.

Because of protests from countries bordering on the Pacific test site, France did not officially admit that tests were held there last year. The same policy is expected to be followed this year.

Israel beats Japan 2-1 as Seoul tourney starts

SEOUL (Reuters). — Winger Moshe Onana scored both Israeli goals here yesterday, as the Israeli national team opened its participation in the World Cup qualifying tournament with an expected 2-1 win over the young Japanese team.

Onana's first goal came in the game's sixth minute, when he headed in a Mordechai Spiegler free kick. The Japanese equalized in the 28th minute, through Syusaku Hirasawa, and continued to press the Israeli defense for the rest of the first half.

The winning Israeli goal came after a defensive mixup 16 minutes into the second half. Israeli coach Edmond Shmilovitch admitted his team took it easy after taking a sixth-minute lead. But any thought they were in for an easy time was quickly dispelled as the Japanese grabbed an equalizer and kept pressing right up to the interval.

Italians win bridge opener

GUARUJA, Brazil (AP). — The opening round of the World Bridge Championships here Tuesday night saw the Italians gain a narrow victory over their chief rivals, the U.S. Aces.

Play was almost even until the end, when a defensive error by one of the American stars allowed Benito Bianchi, making his World Championship debut, to bring home a double game contract. If this had been defeated the match would have resulted in an exact tie.

In the second match played on Tuesday night, Brazil scored a comfortable 19-1 victory over Indonesia.

"In the second half we slowed the game down and played more carefully... and after that second goal the Japanese never looked like winning," the Israeli coach added.

The Israelis now go into a group with Thailand and the losers of tonight's game between Hongkong and Malaysia.

The winner of the Seoul tournament — the Asian group A — will meet either Australia or Iran for a place in next year's World Cup Finals in West Germany.

Israel defeats West Germans to gain finals

VIENNA. — Israel defeated West Germany 84-73 at basketball here to assure itself a place in the finals of the European Basketball Championships in Barcelona in September.

Israel scored its win thanks to a second half recovery led by Tal Brodie and Gabriel Nejmark. At halftime the Germans led 33-28, after outplaying an off-form Israeli squad.

Israel drew level for the first time at 42-42, after which it was a close fight. Israel first took the lead at 56-54. With five minutes to play, Israel led 64-63, after which the German defence fell apart and enabled Israel to win by the 11-point margin.

Brodie was top marksman with 30 points, 26 of them scored in the second half.

Wealthy artist beheaded, boyfriend tries suicide

PARIS (Reuters). — Police investigating the murder of a wealthy American woman artist in Paris said yesterday a young Frenchman tried to commit suicide after decapitating and dismembering her in her plush apartment.

The 22-year-old man described as a boyfriend of the victim, Mrs. Elizabeth Kalman, 42, is said to have told police in hospital: "I want to die. I killed Elizabeth and I must join her in heaven," police sources reported.

The body of Mrs. Kalman, a divorcee, was found in the bathroom of her apartment on the fashionable Avenue Foch.

Her severed head, covered in garish make-up and with eyes wide open, rested on a vase in the foyer surrounded by flowers and candles in the manner of a crude altar.

The first police to arrive on the scene said they recoiled in horror when they opened the door of the apartment. They added that the murder was committed Monday with a big kitchen knife.

Police said that a four-page letter signed by the 22-year-old boyfriend was found in the flat. According to the police, the author of the letter said he had killed Elizabeth Kalman "for pleasure."

Mother, daughter found hanged

NEW YORK (Reuters). — Police said yesterday they could not determine whether a woman and her pregnant daughter, who were found hanged in the basement of their 20-room mansion in suburban New Jersey, had been murdered or committed suicide.

The bodies of Renee Call, 45, and Leslie Grant, 24, both clad in two-piece bathing suits, were discovered on Wednesday by another member of the family.

Police said Mrs. Call's husband had testified last year in an investigation into corruption in several nearby communities. Police declined to link the probe with the deaths of the two women, but prosecutor Anthony Mautone said the deaths "could easily be homicide or suicide."

'Togetherness' raft logs 250 miles

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands (AP). — The raft "Acali" with its "togetherness" crew was reported yesterday about 250 miles south of Las Palmas.

The news agency "Pyresa" said radio reports from the raft said the crew of six women and five men had their first hot meal, pork and potatoes boiled in sea water, and all aboard were well.

The Acali left Las Palmas Saturday headed for Mexico on an expected three-month trip to test human behaviour under stress. It is driven by a sail, and ocean currents.

CAIRO (UPI). — Premier Dom Mintoff of Malta conferred yesterday with Egyptian Deputy Premier Mohammed Abdel Kader Hatem on international matters and bilateral relations, the Middle East News Agency said.

Premier Mintoff arrived in Cairo Tuesday on a three-day visit for talks with Egyptian officials. During this, his first visit to Egypt, Mintoff is expected to meet President Anwar Sadat and Foreign Minister Mohammed Hassan Zayyat, political sources said.

Escapes sought in murder of six in family

DONALDSONVILLE, Georgia (Reuters). — FBI agents and police from three southern states launched a big manhunt yesterday for four men suspected of killing six members of a family on a farm near here.

All six victims — five men and a woman — were shot through the head. The men were found dead yesterday in the caravans the family, the Aldays, used as their home. The nude body of the woman, Mrs. Mary Alday, 25-year-old wife of one of the murdered men, was found about 10 km. from the farm. Police said she had been raped.

The other victims were Ned and Aubrey Alday, both in their 50s, and Ned Alday's three sons — Jimmy, 15, Chester, 28, and Mary's husband, Gerry, 35.

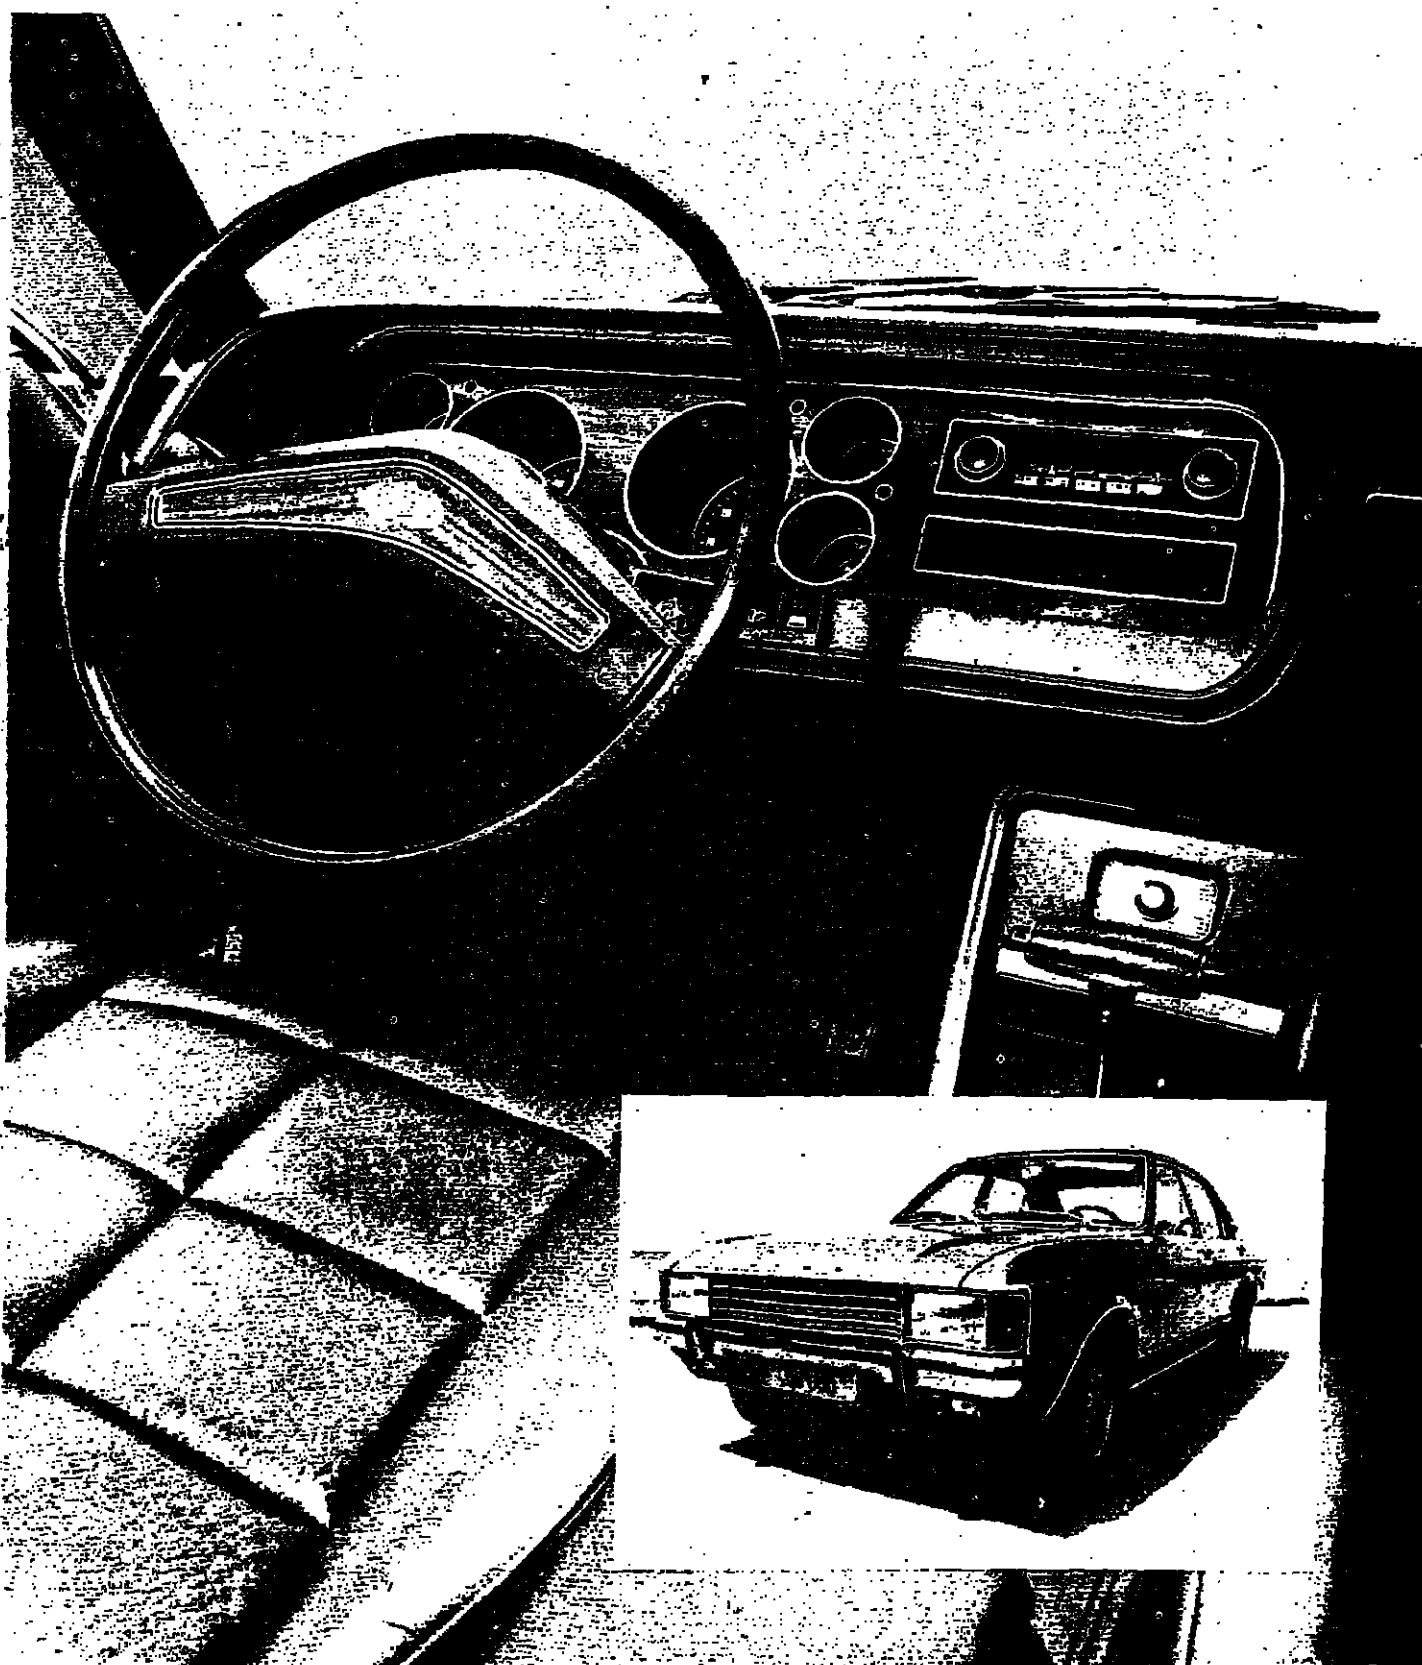

Three of the men being sought were reported to be escaped prisoners from a minimum-security work camp at Townsend, Maryland. Police think the men responsible for the killings followed Mrs. Alday, a welfare worker, when she finished work.

Police said there was no sign of a struggle in the caravans in which the bodies of the five Alday men were found. They apparently were shot one by one as they entered.

Bobby Seale loses in mayoral runoff

OAKLAND, California (AP). — Incumbent John Reading defeated Black Panther party co-founder Bobby Seale in a runoff election Tuesday for Mayor of California's fifth largest city.

Reading, heavily favoured to win a third term, polled 62,294 votes to 30,455 for Seale.

The Standout

Let's face it. In Israel, a car's one of the major purchases of a lifetime.

A car, in Israel, costs about one-third the price of an apartment. Remember how you searched to find the apartment of your dreams? How you visited site after site, talked with builder after builder, planned and replanned to make every square metre count.

A car... the car you're looking for... is worth every bit as much effort. Consider the hours you'll spend in that car... the safety, the comfort, the beauty you have in mind.

And then consider Granada... Ford's answer to your search!

It's a standout.

A special car. For special people with elegant good taste that sets them apart from the crowd.

It's a luxury automobile... fitted with every safety and comfort detail the folks at Ford could think of. (And who, in the automotive world, could possibly think of more?)

Granada's solid, strong, safe. And very beautiful.

Built to take you wherever you're going... in comfort. With lots of luxury leg room. A back seat wide enough to stretch out on. And lots of optional features that let you tailor the Granada to your taste.

It is, as we've said, a standout.

Don't just decide. Shop around. And then make the choice easy.

TEST DRIVE THE GRANADA.
The decision will make itself.

GETTING RID OF A SUB-TENANT

The Supreme Court dismissed an appeal against a judgment of the Tel Aviv District Court, delivered on September 11, 1972 (in C.A. 163/72).

The appellant is a statutory sub-tenant in a flat in which the respondent is the principal statutory tenant. The respondent applied for an eviction order against his sub-tenant on the grounds that he needed the room occupied by him for his own needs, his family having increased. His application was granted by the Magistrate's Court which fixed compensation of IL10,000 for the sub-tenant in order to enable him to procure alternative accommodation.

The District Court, on appeal, confirmed the Magistrate's Court's decision, and the sub-tenant was granted leave to appeal to the Supreme Court.

Section 36(7) of the Tenants Protection Law, 1955, defines as one of the grounds for eviction of a tenant, the fact that "the premises are required by the landlord for his own use, and he has notified the tenant, in writing, of his willingness to place alternative accommodation at his disposal."

In the appeal to the Supreme Court Mr. A. Mitrer appeared for the appellant and Mr. A. Minkowitz for the respondent.

Judgment

Justice Berenson, who delivered the judgment of the Supreme Court, considered the appellant's argument that section 36(7) of the Tenants Protection Law, 1955, applies only to landlords and tenants and not to sub-tenants. It is surprising, he said, that till now the courts have not had an opportunity of dealing directly with the question of whether a tenant is entitled to have his sub-tenant evicted on the grounds of self-need, although the Supreme Court did refer to it indirectly in an obiter dictum, in C.A. 73/50 (P.D. 6/599). The answer to this question would, in his opinion, be held, be in the affirmative, as all the practical and logical considerations are in favour of equating the standing and rights of a tenant vis-a-vis his sub-tenant with those of a landlord vis-a-vis his tenant. For a landlord will let an apartment to a tenant when he has no need of it for his own personal use, and a tenant will, likewise, sub-let part of an apartment to a sub-tenant when he has no need of that part for his own personal needs. If, therefore, a landlord be entitled by the law to receive his apartment back when there has been a change in circumstances and he requires it for his own personal needs, there would appear to be no reason, based either on considerations of logic or social justice, why a tenant should not be entitled to receive part of the apartment back when there has been a similar change in his circumstances as long as he compensates the sub-tenant in a suitable manner.

As to the appellant's argument that the law must be construed literally and section 36(7) makes no mention whatsoever of tenants and sub-tenants, the answer to it is, Justice Berenson went on to hold, that when a literal interpretation of a law leads to illogical and unreasonable consequences then such an interpretation must be rejected in favour of a more realistic and logical interpretation (see also C.A. 44/61, P.D. 16/285; F.E.L. 4/68, P.D. 16/289; and C.A. 73/50, P.D. 6/599). The only realistic and logical interpretation, he continued, is to conclude that if the protection of the Tenants Protection Law extends equally to sub-tenants and tenants, then there is no reason why the grounds upon which a tenant may be deprived of the protection of the law, and evicted as defined in section 36, could not apply equally to a sub-tenant. On the contrary, he held, it is impossible to conclude otherwise. For in the absence of any mention of "sub-tenant" in the whole of section 36, and in the light of the fact that the definition of "tenant" in the Law does not include "sub-tenant," if the courts were to stick meticulously to a literal interpretation of section 36 it would mean that a statutory sub-tenant could never in any circumstances be evicted, and this was patently absurd.

Furthermore it was also repugnant to the policy and previous decisions of the courts which have in the past consistently given eviction orders against sub-tenants when any of the other criteria laid down in section 36 have been proved to exist. In fact it was inconceivable, Justice Berenson stressed, that a sub-tenant whose tenancy is protected by virtue of law, could never be evicted even if he failed to do such elementary things as pay his rent, or observe the fundamental terms of his lease.

The key to the solution of the issue in the present case, Justice Berenson went on to hold, lies, in fact, in section 12 (a) of the Tenants Protection Law, which provides that the Law itself shall "unless the contrary intention appears, apply both to a principal lease and to a sublease." In other words, all the provisions of the Law apply equally to tenants and sub-tenants, in the absence of any contrary intention; and as there is nothing in section 36(7) which points to any contrary intention, the provisions of this section, which deal with the needs of a lessor vis-a-vis a lessee, must be deemed to apply equally to a sub-lessor and a sub-lessee.

In conclusion, Justice Berenson dismissed the appellant's request for a remedy in justice, holding that the purpose of a remedy in justice is to prevent, in justifiable circumstances, a tenant from remaining without a roof over his head in consequence of his breach of the terms of his lease, whereas an eviction order under section 36(7) is given only when suitable alternative accommodation is provided for the outgoing tenant (or sub-tenant) by the lessor who requires the premises for his own need.

Appeal dismissed with IL1,000 costs.

Judgment given on April 24, 1973.

THE PUBLIC IS CORDIALLY INVITED

Arkia wins

TEL AVIV. — No inland airline except Arkia may sell tickets on regular scheduled flights, according to an injunction made permanent in the District Court here.

The smaller airlines can continue to make chartered flights, the judges ruled. But they will lose their licences if they operate regular scheduled flights in future.

Arkia had requested the injunction against three smaller airlines companies, which have been selling tickets through a conglomerate called United Israel Airlines. Arkia has also filed a IL200,000 damages suit against the smaller companies, for illegal competition, but no defence brief has been filed yet.

A has-relief depicting the history of Jerusalem has been put up near the Jaffa Gate to mark Israel's 25th anniversary. The work is by Mordechai Argam, a 34-year-old Israeli-born artist. Argam is also presenting a sound and light show explaining the sculpture from 10 to 12 in the mornings and 7 to 10 in the evenings. (Sol Herman)

Doctors from 18 lands here for congress

By MACABEE DEAN

Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — Several hundred Jewish physicians from 18 countries will attend the 9th triennial world congress of the Israel Medical Association. The conference will open in Jerusalem on May 21 and will hold meetings in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and Haifa.

This was stated here on Tuesday by Dr. Walter Abeles, of Jerusalem, president of the congress, Dr. Ram Yisrael, president of the Israel Medical Association, and Dr. S. Zelud, head of the world council of the Non-Resident Fellowship of the Israel Medical Association.

The Non-Resident Fellowship has 12,000 members in 38 countries — double the membership of its parent body. Jewish physicians from Eastern Europe, including Russia, Yugoslavia and Rumania, have recently joined the Non-Resident Fellowship. But they are not expected to attend. Jewish physicians from Iran, Liberia, and South Africa, are due to come. Also attending the congress will be a delegation of 14 physicians, all gentiles, from West Germany.

The theme of the congress will be congenital malformations and hereditary disorders.

Five years for arsonist, aged 17

TEL AVIV. — A 17-year-old boy from Rehovot was this week sentenced to five years for setting fire to a number of public buildings as well as committing many burglaries and thefts.

The district court here recommended that the boy, whose name was withheld from publication, be hospitalized in a mental institution during his jail term.

The prosecution said the youth had set fire to a number of buildings in Rehovot, including the court house, the Kupat Holim and Health Ministry offices. (Him)

Tepid terror tale

Death Of A Stranger (Chen, Tel Aviv, Armon, Haifa and Armon, Ramat Gan) is the first German-Israeli co-production of a feature film. It has an international cast, a contemporary story, was filmed on location in Israel and Germany with English dialogue and is clearly aimed at the overseas market. One could only wish that it had a more convincing story and had greater impact.

Basically the film deals with Arab terrorist activities. Dr. Hersfeld (Hardy Kruger), a German lawyer, inadvertently becomes embroiled in an Israeli intelligence scheme to track down a group of Arab terrorists and a young woman member of the gang, Amina (Gila Almagor, who, with her large, liquid black eyes and raven hair, resembles Lella Khaled).

The film has two themes — the fight against terrorism and the human relationship between Hersfeld and Amina. Paul Hengge, an Austrian who wrote the screenplay and also directed part of the film before it was taken over by Reza Badiyi (both new names to me), would seem to wish to imply that Amina is a dedicated idealist, torn between her duty to her cause and her love for Hersfeld. He is the son of a Jew-

Little tension or suspense is narrated and the pace is kept even and too slow. That exec actor, Jason Robards, has little to do as a top Shin Bet man and suspects he is there for the mour of his name. If one were to use one word to describe the film, it would be "tepid." The colour photograph Tomislav Platter, however, is good and provides some fine of Israel and Germany.

Les Prehudes." The L.P.O. musicians are most sensitive and their performance varies enormously depending on the conductor. After a brilliant performance with Zubin Mehta last week, the orchestra gave Shalom Ronit-Riklis no more than conventional cooperation. Mendelssohn's Spirits of the Woods were rather too human, and the slightly eerie Fairy Tale atmosphere was no match for the mundane Binyamin Harel.

The same routine playing pervaded the Brahms Double Concerto, where a guiding, driving spirit was missing. The two soloists are excellent instrumentalists and group leaders in the orchestra, but neither have an outgoing temperament nor individualistic approach to soloist tasks. The conductor, too, accompanied but did not actively lead. The result was a flawless execution of the score but a not much personal involvement or stimulating interpretation. This, with the long stretches of laboured formal elaborations so typical of Brahms, made for a not very enlightening performance.

Hahn Alexander's newest piece was commissioned with an educational purpose in mind and is intended for the "young and the young-at-heart." Based on a script by Dr. Regele, professor of Literature at the Hebrew University, it used the didactic methods of Erik-ten Siegmester and Prokofiev;

Liszt's "Les Prehudes" should be reserved for summer promenade concerts. Its insouciant, somewhat gaudy, with pseudo-Wagnerian turn always reminds me of a plaster-of-paris statue in a pose and it is unbearable in serious concert.

This trend is, in a way, another aspect of our fashion independence from America in this year of independence, because "ethnic" ways of dressing are said to be on the wane in the United States, the presentation of "30's" styles there being, possibly, as Fini says,
"an attempt by manufacturers to get women out of pants."
About a third of the styles in this show are, nevertheless, panta-styles. Fini herself says,
"I just don't feel right in short skirts any more." (When she spoke to The Post, she was wearing a white Maskit pants suit with a black cotton-batiste shirt.)

But doesn't the Israel Army, necting fashion to soldiers' welfare: "We have the soldier girls to thank for the mini-skirt." (Culture historians will recall that when the mini first appeared on the hostess here, the girls in uniform, by sheer force of will, cut through the brass and hatched up their skirts. A major contribution, surely, to soldiers' welfare.)

The presence of Yael (dressed in her usual carefully understated style, in a white blouse and long black skirt) delivering a carefully understated brief identification of each fashion, beautifully free of such obvious points as that the dress on view is blue, provided exactly the tone Fini was looking for. It also, of course, raised echoes of the recent criticism of Yael's criticism of our affluent way of life. The clothes shown are as Fini says, "largely unsellable — partly because we in Israel don't have much opportunity to wear such opulent styles." Well, that may in itself be a moral of residual simplicity; and, Fini adds, "What attracted Yael to the idea of the show was precisely the combination of art and fashion."

Painter's influence Fini's own contribution to the show is definitely in these terms — a gala dress designed "very much under the influence" of her painter husband, Yohanan Simon. But Fini refused to describe it further or provide a photograph: she is, after all, the (volunteer) co-ordinator of the entire affair.

Two designers whose stories combine endless elements of what has happened in 25 years of Israeli fashion are Roy Ben Joseph and Yael Golev. Roy, who has earned and received enormous success abroad, is according to Fini "our one designer with an absolute feeling of the Mediterranean, who uses accessories and crafts with tremendous talent, and who also utilizes cheap fabrics."
In other words, she has hit upon that elusive trick, mass production of individual clothes — and it all sprang from an unpretentious "pyjama factory" run by her parents. (Interestingly,

Shirt, scarf and blouse by Roy in person has many of Fini's qualities — a direct honesty, and a strong, red-haired physical presence). On the other hand, when Yael appears in song festivals in Roy designs, the effect is open to criticism. Why a girl with Yael's figure should put herself into a tent is hard to understand. It becomes clear that these are fine ideas for the hostess at home or at the beach, but not in public — not even in today's permissive climate, when suburbia has practically become to-hemia.

The other designer is Yael Golev, whose "25" dress opens the evening. "25" becoming a semi-abstract design on a pale silk shantung dress (the fabric coming, appropriately, from the Old City). Yael became one of Fini's star pupils after finishing his army service; he started cutting shirts at Steiner's shirt-and-dress factory at the age of 15, and in his current design keeps in mind what the young girl on a limited budget wants to wear.

From that to a dramatic opening style for the 25th Anniversary is a good summing up of what Israeli fashion development has been all about.

Protecting an old city against the inroads of progress

By ABRAHAM RABINOVICH
Jerusalem Post Reporter

THE problem of preserving an old town in the middle of a modern, booming capital was the central topic this week when the mayor of Quito, Ecuador, Sixto Duran-Ballen, met here with Jerusalem Mayor Teddy Kollek.

Mr. Duran-Ballen, who ended a five-day visit to Israel with his wife yesterday, presides over a city founded by the Spaniards in 1534, about the same time that the Otto-mans were building the present wall around Jerusalem's Old City.

In an interview with The Jerusalem Post, Mr. Duran-Ballen noted that Quito, like Jerusalem, is experiencing tremendous development.
The population of the city increased in 10 years from 300,000 to almost 600,000.

An architect and planner himself, the mayor has been devoting much of his attention since assuming office three years ago to keeping this development away from Quito's old quarter, which is one of the finest examples of Spanish colonial architecture in the Americas.

One of the planning experts assisting him is Prof. Aris Shachar of the Hebrew University, who spends several weeks each year in Quito as a consultant.

High-rise buildings are banned from Quito's old quarter and from a "zone of influence" extending for about two city blocks around its periphery. Mr. Duran-Ballen explained. (The proposed outline plan for Jerusalem's Old City and environments contains a similar regulation.)

Within the old quarter, buildings can be restored, but no new buildings constructed. This is more stringent a ruling than in Jerusalem's Old City, where new buildings are permitted within certain limitations of scale.

The principal problem, because of the physical configuration of Quito, set in a high valley running through the Andean mountains, is the transportation network. The city, which is at an altitude of almost 3,000 metres, is 29 kilometres long and no wider at any point than 4.5 kilometres. Traffic going from one end of the city to the other has to pass through the old quarter at the centre. To keep the area from succumbing to the ever mounting pressure of traffic, it was decided to tunnel beneath it with two arteries, one 700 metres long and the other 500 metres. The cost will be about $9 million. The Jerusalem Master Plan also calls for a traffic tunnel at the North-West edge of the Old City, although it is not at all certain that this will ever be built.

Mr. Duran-Ballen, who is considered a possible candidate for the presidency of Ecuador, received a degree in architecture and planning from Columbia University in New York. He served for four years as Ecuador's Minister of Public Works and worked in Washington for eight years with the Inter-American Development Bank, becoming chief of the Projects Department. In 1970 he ran for mayor of Quito as a Christian Socialist against five other candidates, winning with 40 per cent of the vote. "The Jewish community (something over 1,000 persons) helped my campaign," he noted.

After meeting Jerusalem's planners and touring the city extensively, Mr. Duran-Ballen said he was very impressed with both the pace of building and the sensitivity of the planning. "They're planning on a human scale. It's not grandiose."

He was also impressed at the way the planners thought concretely about the future, ordering buildings set back in order to preserve rights-of-way for roads that will be needed many years hence. "That's something I want to look at when I get back to Quito," he said. "Maybe we're not looking far enough into the future."

Quito Mayor Sixto Duran-Ballen

of existing building regulations and evasive and irrelevant statements by the promoters which, the committee says, put the project's legality in doubt.
Despite a decision of the district committee that all residents neighbouring the projected 35 dunam building site in Rehov Hanitke should be informed by registered letter of the project by the local town planning committee, "neither the promoters nor the local committee have found it necessary to comply with the district committee's decision, and no notices were sent," it is charged.

Chicago investors
The project is promoted by the Tirman Investments Company, represented by a local law firm which says the investors are a group from Chicago. In an apparent bid for approval by the district committee, the law firm points out that the investment would be made in foreign currency, and that the investors are active in pro-Israel bodies and substantial contributors to Israel causes. The firm even submitted a photostat of a letter from the Israel Embassy to one of the investors inviting him to attend the economic conference in Jerusalem next month.

The committee's main argument deals with the rapid rate of building-up which the city executive recommends for the project. According to local town planning committee figures the rate for the project is 60 per cent instead of the 42 per cent allowed for the area under the existing regulations. However, after examining the figures, the committee concluded that the building rate would in fact be 132 per cent, over three times the previously permitted rate.

The city hall's new outline plan completed in 1967 (and not yet presented to the district town planning committee for approval) calls for consideration of each area's topography and for the preservation of the view, especially from public areas, the committee points out.
However they say the city recommends a plan which ignores its own new regulations on town planning.
The committee also draws attention to worsening traffic congestion in and near Horev Square, in Central Ahuza, which the new high-density project would only aggravate.

Haifaite oppose high-rise project

Jerusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. — Over 600 Haifa residents are opposing a planned high-rise project of some 300 apartments on Mt. Carmel.

The project's opponents, who live on Rehov Einstein, east of Ahuza, overlook the intended building site on Rehov Hanitke. The project includes three high-rise buildings and a string of four-storey houses.

Residents say the high-rise buildings, 10, 12 and 14 storeys high, would block the view northwards.
It would also introduce noise and traffic congestion and further shrink green areas. In addition, it would cause them material damage through a decline in property values.

The local town planning committee (identical with the municipal council) supports the project and has recommended to the district town planning committee, that it be approved. Some 100 residents on Rehov Einstein have submitted their objections to the district committee and by law they must be heard in open session.

A panel of architects, town planners and lawyers have examined the project and say they have discovered a number of flaws, violations

ter inflationary pressure Bank of Israel tightens credit

DAVID KRIVINE
The Government "borrowed" IL300m. from the Bank of Israel in April to finance its expenditures — and this created new inflationary pressures. The means of payment grew by 2.8 per cent during that month. The banks will replace the missing IL300m. in the export credit funds in three monthly instalments. They have also undertaken to go on investing in the Government Short-Term Loan at the rate of IL4m. a situation, when the central bank was pumping IL50m. in all out of the economy every month (apart from what is done under the general liquidity regulations).

The renewed squeeze on credit has evoked opposition in business circles, which was given voice at Cabinet level by the Minister of Commerce and Industry, Haim Bar-Lev, and the Minister of Agriculture, Haim Gvati. Dr. Shiffrin's comment: "We have to combat inflation, and that hurts. When people complain, it means we are doing our job."

Asked about the big price rise suffered in April, of 3.9 per cent, Dr. Shiffrin had this to say: "Half the rise can be attributed to the recent cut in subsidies on foodstuffs and fuel, and to price increases abroad. The other half is due to higher consumption inside the Israel economy."

Prospects for the future? "It depends chiefly on measures taken to reduce consumption and control inflation," he said, adding: "So far only our bank seems to be tackling the problem."

Not counterfeit

A spokesman for the Bank of Israel last night discounted press reports of "large numbers" of IL100 counterfeit notes in circulation in the Hadera region.

The suspicion arose when a Hadera resident reported to local police that not all the IL100 notes in his possession were identical in appearance. The bank spokesman explained that for identification purposes certain changes are introduced within printing runs as banknotes are produced. Thus, the colour of the serial numbers may vary, the watermark may be dropped, the watermark may be slightly altered and the vertical trace line — visible when the note is held against a light — may be switched from the left side to the right.

Arab sector got IL30m. last year for development

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter
Some IL30m. has been spent in development works in the Arab sector of Israel, half from Treasury funds and half from local authorities, Interior Minister Yosef Burg told the Knesset yesterday.

Summing up the work of his Ministry over the budgetary year, Dr. Burg said that the sum included some IL9.5m. on education, IL9.5m. on electricity networks, IL7m. on roads, and the rest mostly on health and sanitation.

He was answering New Commun- ist charges that the Interior Ministry was not giving the Arab sector a square deal.

Bigger grant urged for new-born babies

Jerusalem Post Knesset Reporter
The Knesset Labour Committee yesterday recommended that the National Insurance Institute raise the grant for new-born babies nursery equipment from IL150 to IL196.

The allowance for maternity hospital fees (for four days) was raised last month from IL360 to IL504.

Committee chairman Shoshana Arbel rebuffed the National Insurance Institute, at the session, for not filling the vacant post of head of the maternity insurance division.

The Pas Company launched its first motorized oil barge, Pas-Yam II (above), in Ashdod on Monday. (Pas-Yam I is a towed oil barge operating in Eilat port.) The barge, with a capacity of 100 tons of oil and diesel fuel, will supply engine oil to ships of between 60,000 and 120,000 ton displacement, in 60 per cent less time than was required until now. Mrs. Hanna Zilker, wife of Ashdod Mayor Zvi Zilker, launched the vessel.

U.N. to study multi-national corporations

UNITED NATIONS (AP). — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim named an expert group to study the impact of multi-national corporations on Tuesday. Chile immediately charged that it was weighted with directors of private firms.

Ambassador Herman Santa Cruz told the U.N. Economic and Social Council that multi-national corporations had committed "monstrous acts against the people of Chile." He reminded the council it had decided to study such corporations "as a result of the alarm caused by their harmful and criminal activities."

Santa Cruz said the 20-member committee should contain more professors of political science, economics or international affairs and more trade union leaders.

IT ATTEMPT

Chilean President Salvador Allende has accused the U.S. corporation International Telephone and Telegraph (ITT) of attempting to foment civil war in Chile to prevent him from taking office after he won the 1970 election.

Dr. Waldheim announced 18 names and said he is awaiting confirmation from a British and a Brazilian.

He said the expert group will make recommendations to the economic and social council next summer which may "bring forth accepted standards of behaviour and a measure of international accountability."

Transport Ministry to aid Zaire

The Transport Ministry will assist the Republic of Zaire in developing its transport systems — particularly public transport — the Ministry's director-general, Dan Hiran, announced yesterday.

Mr. Hiran said this at a luncheon honouring the visiting director-general of Zaire's Transport Authority, Monga Mbondo. Zaire's Ambassador, General Yvonne Lombardo Loujail, who attended the luncheon, praised Israel for its cooperation and aid it has been extending to his country.

WALL STREET

Market seesaw

NEW YORK (AP). — The stock market seemed yesterday, opening higher, dropping, then recovering after the White House announced that ousted White House Counsel John Dean was "clearly in charge" of the administration's post-Watergate investigation.

Overall, declining issues on the New York stock exchange ran ahead of advancing issues by about seven to six. Industrials were steady, utilities and transportation issues weak and financials somewhat stronger.

The market is super-sensitive to Watergate sight now, said Larry Washel of Sachs & Co. "The White House announcement that their hands are clean just shows how super-sensitive Wall Street is to the Watergate situation."

The Dow Jones average of 20 industrials, up five early in the day and later down seven, closed the day fractionally down 0.87 at 317.07.

Declines edged out advances 778 to 592 in the 1,175 issues changing hands on the New York Stock Exchange.

The broad-based New York Stock Exchange index of some 1,500 common shares finished down 0.07 at 56.44. Volume was 13.30 million shares. Memorex Corp. was the most active issue, down 2 1/2 at 2 1/2.
